I. Introduction

The Renewable Natural Resources (RNR) sector plays a major role in improving the economy and livelihood of our people. Its contribution to the GDP was 16.77% in 2015 (NSB, 2015). The 11th Five Year Plan aims to further accelerate RNR sector growth by making farming more cost efficient and market-responsive.

Development of market infrastructure is one of the main strategies to boost the growth of the sector. In order to induce farmers to produce more, and for better delivery of the products to the market, infrastructures are required to be put in strategic locations. Collection sheds to help producers assemble their produce, stores to help minimize storage losses and pack-house facilities to prepare produce for market are critical in the value chain. Furthermore, structures like sales outlet along the highways and peri-urban areas as well as structures like weekend market sheds in the district and major towns have to be established or expanded to help growers take advantage of the growing demand of the urban population.

In an effort to aid planners, implementers and other stakeholders on their path to better infrastructure planning, management and investments, this inventory is prepared by Department of Agricultural Marketing & Co-operatives, in collaboration with the Dzongkhags and other agencies. The inventory provides information on existing numbers, location, utilization status and investments made.
